6. On 4 and 5 November, the unit was inspected by Minister President Grotewohl, Minister of the Interior Stoph and several Soviet generals.
7. The state of training of the unit which had been inspected by about 120 officers of the Ministry of the Interior from 26 September to 6 October 1953, was called unsatisfactory at the final inspection. All units therefore intensified field training, practicing up to company level. 4
8. The armored personnel carriers which arrived from 19 to 25 October, and were assigned to the 2d A-Kommando were 3-axle M-4 type vehicles. 4
9. The morale of the unit was extremely poor during the period under review and even worse than it had been prior to the large dismissal action. Acts of disobedience were a frequent occurrence. The officers were criticized for this situation as their conduct was not up to standards. Rows and altercations often developed between officers and men at dancing parties. Cases of Awol, burglary and thefts occurred at a higher rate than previously. One of the chief causes of this state of affairs was the poor food which, as a result of a shortage of competent cooks, was frequently spoilt. Another factor to breed dissatisfaction was the allotment of dwelling space to married soldiers and the fact that officers were given preferential treatment. The officers inspecting troops had voiced concern about this situation.
10. Soviet advisors assigned to the 2d A-Kommando were given completely furnished new apartments for which 7,000 eastmarks had been spent. Source learned that the Soviet advisors received between 1,400 and 1,600 eastmarks up to lieutenant colonel, between 1,800 and 2,000 eastmarks as colonels and 2,400 and more eastmarks as generals.

1. Comment. The information indicates that the total strength of the Bereitschaft excluding the engineer battalion and the AAA battalion, was about 8,000 men in early November 1953. The strength of the AAA battalion possibly is included in the strength estimate of the B-Kommando in Droegeheide. The previous report by same source failed to indicate the strength of the 3d A-Kommando and of the engineer battalion.
2. Comment. It is known from previous information that the filling up of the Mechanized Bereitschaft in Potsdam is being given priority.
3. Comment. Volunteers recruited by the recent recruiting campaign are scheduled to be assigned to units of TV 24 in Saxony and Thuringia to bring these to the strength of TV 12. [redacted] and [redacted]
